A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER FOR FACULTY AND STAFF AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND AT COLLEGE PARK

OCTOBER 11, 1993
VOLUME 8, NUMBER 6

Coca-Cola and UMCP to Help "At Risk" Students

A partnership between The Coca-Cola Company, the University of Maryland at College Park and the District of Columbia public schools will help "at risk" high school students succeed in college.

The Coca-Cola Access to Higher Education Program is funded by The Coca-Cola Foundation through a two-year, $100,000 grant and developed by the university's College of Education. It will identify and provide assistance to selected District of Columbia public school students who demonstrate the potential for post secondary education but who, without intervention, would probably not continue their education beyond high school.

"This program addresses a concern shared by The Coca-Cola Company, the University of Maryland, District of Columbia schools, and, in fact, all educators and employers in the United States," noted Franklin Smith, superintendent of schools, District of Columbia. "That mutual concern is the preparation of an increased number of students for high school graduation and college admission."

"Every young person deserves access to the opportunities that higher education makes possible," said Robert Shannon, vice president and general manager of Coca-Cola Enterprises Northeast. "We are proud to help open the door to those opportunities in partnership with the University of Maryland and District of Columbia public schools." The Coca-Cola Foundation has made a $50 million, decade-long commitment to advance excellence in education in the 1990s.

Fourteen District of Columbia high school teachers will be invited to participate in the program each year. Each teacher will identify one third-year high school student who he or she believes has academic potential but is unlikely to enter college without direct assistance.

"All it takes is for someone to be there to eliminate those small factors that may keep these children from succeeding," said Sandra Maddox, one of the teachers who will participate in the program. "That's what we're here for."

After observing their selected students, teachers will, under the leadership of a College of Education faculty member, plan and implement an intervention program designed to increase the likelihood of the student attending a college. They also will assist the student in applying to the college or university of his or her choice.

Students who successfully complete The Coca-Cola Access to Higher Education Program and are admitted to College Park will be enrolled in the Academic Achievement Program, which provides academic skill enhancement, instruction in English, mathematics, and general college skills within a structured, comprehensive academic support system. Students also will be eligible to compete for approximately 10 scholarships.

Scholarships were awarded this year to four District of Columbia public school graduates currently enrolled in the university's Academic Achievement Program.

OUTLOOK Comings and Goings

I'm delighted to announce that Jennifer Hawes, presently editor/writer at the University of Maryland at Baltimore (UMAB) will be joining the Public Information staff as editor of OUTLOOK, effective Oct. 18.

Jennifer currently edits UMAB's bi-weekly internal newspaper The Voice, as well as UMAB Today, a twice-yearly alumni tabloid. The periodicals were recognized in 1992 by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) with a silver medal for tabloid publishing improvement.

A graduate of the University of Delaware, Jennifer joined the UMAB staff as a public information officer in 1986, and has edited The Voice and UMAB Today since 1988.

It is with more mixed feelings that I also announce the departure of John Fritz, acting editor of OUTLOOK since January. John will be joining the UMAB public relations staff as public information officer, also effective Oct. 18. This office and the university as a whole owe John a large debt of gratitude for his commitment and constancy in editing OUTLOOK on an interim basis through a turbulent year. He will be sorely missed within the Public Information Office, but we wish him all success in his new responsibilities at UMAB.

Also joining the staff temporarily, as editorial consultant on OUTLOOK during this transitional period, will be Dianne Burch, a communications consultant and freelance writer. Dianne's appointment will be for a six-week period, beginning Oct. 7. Her experience includes community relations management at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Maryland from 1988 to 1993 and, earlier, 13 years in communications at (you guessed it) UMAB, where from 1984 to 1988 she was responsible for editing The Voice.

In the coming weeks we will begin a search for an associate editor of OUTLOOK, to provide permanent writing and editing support for Jennifer.

College Park Senate Meets
Oct. 14.....4

College Park Senate to Meet Oct. 14

The next meeting of the College Park Senate is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 14, at 3:30 p.m. in Room 0200 Skinner. Provost Daniel Fallon will be the featured speaker for the meeting, delivering his first address to the senate. An opportunity for questions and answers will follow his remarks. Action issues on the agenda include revisions to the senate's bylaws, and a motion to rename the program in Agricultural Engineering to Biological Resources Engineering. All meetings of the College Park Senate are open to the campus community. Call 405-5805 for more information or a copy of the agenda.

Lecture & Cultural Fair Mark National Hispanic Heritage Month

The campus Hispanic community has joined efforts to coordinate events celebrating National Hispanic Heritage Month (Sept. 15-Oct. 15).

Pedro Aviles, executive director of the Washington-based Latino Civil Rights Task Force, was invited as campus guest lecturer Sept. 30, to formally kick off the university's celebration of National Hispanic Heritage Month said Jairo Fuertes, president of the recently formed Hispanic Faculty, Staff, Graduate Student Association (HFSGSA).

Aviles, who emerged as a leader from the Mount Pleasant riots that resulted from the shooting of a Hispanic man by district police in 1991, said the "new wave" of Hispanic immigrants in the Washington area are more reluctant to change their culture.

"As an immigrant, I am resistant to the concept of assimilation. A lot of us are saying ... maybe we should all change. I change; you change," said Aviles, who has lived in this country for 19 years. "I also want you to know that I have certain things to contribute."

The lecture, which was a joint effort of several campus offices including the Department of Spanish and Portuguese and the Hispanic Faculty, Staff and Graduate Student Association, was also the first of a lecture series titled "Contemporary Voices of Our Latino Community," which will highlight issues facing the Hispanic community.

"We must realize the unique ethnic diversity that exists among Latinos," said Aviles. "We have Afro-Latinos and Asian Latinos."

"I was impressed with his knowledge," said Mary Cothran, director of the Office of Multi-Ethnic Student Education, about Aviles, who also talked about the existing conflicts among Washington's minority groups. "If we continue to work with [the Latino Civil Rights Task Force], the university itself can learn from him," she said.

Hispanics on campus, who make up 3.6 percent of the student body, represent 19 nationalities said Fuertes, who has done graduate research on the acculturation of campus Hispanic students.

The HFSGSA is also collaborating with the Hispanic Student Union and the Office of Multi-Ethnic Student Education to coordinate the 5th Annual Hispanic Heritage Celebration on Friday, Oct. 15.

The evening program, which this year will feature a local salsa band and a Bolivian folkloric dance group, is open to the entire campus community, said Fuertes. "Sharing our culture promotes cultural awareness and

Hispanic Heritage Month

The origin of Hispanic Heritage Month began in 1968 when President Lyndon B. Johnson proclaimed the week of Sept. 15 as National Hispanic Week.

In 1988, former President Ronald Reagan signed a presidential proclamation making Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 National Hispanic Heritage Month. The time period was chosen because many Latin American countries celebrate their independence day during this period.

Hispanic faculty, staff and students at the university are collaborating on two primary events which included a lecture and the annual Hispanic Heritage Celebration on Oct. 15 to celebrate the month.

diversity and that is one of our basic tenets of our organization," said HSU president Fernando Carpio.

"We're not limiting ourselves to this month only ... Cultural awareness should be something that continues throughout the year," said Luis Restrepo, editor of HFSGA's newsletter Presente.

Conference Will Examine Creole Literature

On the Caribbean islands of Haiti, Guadeloupe and Martinique, the assertion of a culturally black identity has formed a new kind of French literature that takes its roots from Creole languages and culture.

The intermingling of the French and Creole strands will be examined during "Expanding the Definition of Creole," an international colloquium to be held on Oct. 22 and 23.

Sponsored by the French department, the colloquium will host scholars from the U.S., Canada, France and the Caribbean, including prominent Caribbean writers who will read from and discuss their works. Talks will be given in English and in French.

Maryse Conde and Madeleine Cottenet Hage, both professors in the department of French and Italian, co-organized the event, which is co-sponsored by the Africa and the Americas Committee, Latin American Studies, Comparative Literature, the Graduate School, the College of Arts and Humanities and the Maryland Humanities Council.

The program is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Ralph Tarica at 405-4025.

A Season in Rihata, by professor Maryse Conde, is the story of an African community which struggles with the choice between progress and tradition.

Craig Oliver Appointed Interim Dean of Agriculture

Craig Oliver, director of the Cooperative Extension Service (CES), has been appointed interim dean of the College of Agriculture, effective Oct. 11.

A search committee chaired by Rudolph Lamone, professor in the College of Business and Management, will initiate the search for a permanent dean, whose appointment is expected to begin on July 1, 1994.

In announcing the appointment of an interim dean, Provost Daniel Fallon said Oliver's experience with Maryland agriculture, as an administrator, and his support within the faculty made him "a natural choice for the transition in which we are engaged."

While serving as interim dean, Oliver will continue in his position as director of CES.

Van Munching Hall Dedication Set for October 16

Van Munching Hall, new home of the College of Business and Management and the School of Public Affairs, will be dedicated on Oct. 16. Mr. and Mrs. Leo Van Munching, Jr., along with their eight children—and their spouses and children—will be honored guests at the event. Last May, 1950 alumnus Van Munching pledged a gift of $5 million to the university. He is the president of Van Munching and Company, the sole importer of Heineken and Amstel Light, the country's leading imported beers.

Book Outlines Characteristics of Excellent Public Relations

The International Association of Business Communicators' Research Foundation decided in 1985 to fund a grant for a study to determine the value of public relations to organizations.

Two campus journalism professors, the husband and wife team of James and Larissa Grunig, were part of the six-member team whose proposal was selected to receive the $400,000 grant.

Eight years later, the research is now becoming available to the public. The first of three proposed books, Excellence in Public Relations and Communication Management, expanded the original research question to ask how the public relations department should be managed.

The group conducted a survey of 327 companies from the United States, Canada, and the United Kingdom to determine how public relations departments are being conducted and what the perceptions of their value are.

Excellence, as the first book has been dubbed, provides the theory which underlies the entire project. It proposes 14 characteristics that the most effective public relations departments must have, including a direct reporting relationship to senior management, a senior public relations person in the managerial mode and a participative rather than authoritarian organizational culture.

The remaining books, due to be completed in May 1995, are the results of the survey and the follow-up interviews, and a practical guide to excellence aimed at practitioners who would rather read a quick overview than the weighty, 600-page first book.

Excellence was published in May 1992, and is currently popular for graduate studies, according to James Grunig.

Writing Center Provides Relief for Anguished Writers

Sometimes it helps to have someone else read what you've written and give suggestions that may improve the final product.

Started as a service for English 101 students in 1974, the Writing Center functions as a free source of input, expertise and an extra pair of eyes for anguished writers.

"We don't proofread," says tutor Don Houck. "In general, we look at structure, grammar and development. We try to look from an audience point of view."

The center is staffed by undergraduate and graduate students and members of the Retired Volunteer Service Corps, a group of retired professionals working all over campus.

Many of the retirees have been working in the center since 1980.

"We wanted to bring in people who had known writing in the real world," says Leigh Ryan, the center's director.

Tutors help students with topics, organization, and grammar. "This is a place where a student can sit down and say: 'Can you read my paper and tell me how to make it better?'" Ryan says.

For quick questions on grammar, word choice, or punctuation, the center has begun a Grammar Hotline this semester with a grant from the Center for Teaching Excellence.

"We have been doing this on an informal basis for years," Ryan says. "People from around campus, law offices, and businesses would call us to ask questions. We're trying to make it formal."

Mostly staff has used the hotline so far, Ryan says.

People have called with questions on bibliographies, the use of the latin phrase "et al," abbreviations and how to set up a resumé, among other things.

"I'm not even sure if there are right or wrong answers, to some questions," Ryan says. "Some things aren't in the books. So we get together and discuss it or call someone to ask what the politically correct answer is."

Don't expect your whole paper to be streamlined over the phone, Houck says.

"The hotline is primarily for questions that can be answered fast," Houck says. "If it gets too in depth, we ask them to make an appointment to come in."

The Grammar Hotline (405-3787) is open Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and the Writing Center is open Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Friday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. If you wish to make an appointment, call 405-3785.

University Plans National Alcohol Awareness Activities

Ten years ago, National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week (NCAAW), was born on the University of Maryland at College Park campus.

William Thomas, vice president for Student Affairs, was present at that meeting and praises the "realistic approach" of NCAAW, which is being celebrated this year from Oct. 17 to 24, with helping many students.

While some activities occur on an ongoing basis, College Park's alcohol awareness initiatives for the week are as follows:

- TERP CHOICES alcohol-free pregame events include games, tournaments, a breathalyzer demonstration given by university police, and a "Mocktail Tailgate Party" sponsored by Resident Life after the football game vs. Duke (Saturday, Oct. 16).

- S.U.D.S. (Students Understanding Drinking Sensibly) involves university police providing voluntary breathalyzer tests at local restaurants around midnight; those scoring under the legal limit will receive a t-shirt. Participating businesses include Bentley's (Monday, Oct. 19), Rendezvous Inn (Tue., Oct. 20, and Santa Fe (Wednesday, Oct. 21).

- Good Morning Commuters will provide information about alcohol and other drugs, prevention programs and alternative activities (Wednesday, Oct. 20, 7:30-9:30 a.m., Stamp Student Union Atrium).

In addition to these activities, GAMMA (Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol) will be planning an event during the week. The Department of Resident Life is also planning several activities to be announced later.

For more information on College Park's involvement in National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, call 314-8128.
